

The Storm

She (and you) deserve real support here — not just products, but tools for the conversation itself.

YOUR TIPS & TRICKS

- 01 Prioritize her sleep environment first — cooling sheets, blackout curtains, routine.
- 02 Seek a provider experienced with adolescent hormonal health.
- 03 Introduce a shared journal so she can express what's hard to say.
- 04 Keep skincare minimal and soothing until things stabilize.
- 05 Build a weekly low-pressure ritual together to keep connection strong.
- 06 Remember: intense doesn't mean permanent.

YOUR DAILY MANTRAS

"This storm will pass, even when it doesn't feel like it."

"Asking for help is strength, not weakness."

"I am not alone in this."

"My body is working hard right now — I can be gentle with it."

"This hard season does not define the rest of my life."

"I am worthy of support and softness."

DID YOU KNOW

A significant share of teens experience real, disruptive PMS or cycle-related symptoms — it is not "just in your head," and it is worth real medical support.